Does Garmin Edge 840 have solar?

Garmin has just announced the new Edge 840, as well as Edge 540 units. And like last year, with the more expensive Edge 1040, both the 540 and 840 get Solar variants. However, the changes go far beyond just sunny-side-up or not. In fact, arguably, the solar piece is really the least important change.

Is the Garmin Edge 840 a good battery?

Compared to its predecessor, the new Garmin Edge 840 is slightly larger and weighs about 10 grams more. However, it offers a good balance between size and weight. If 30 hours of battery life and solar charging are still not sufficient, the Garmin Edge 840 can be charged on the go with a compatible external battery.

Does Garmin have a 540 or 840 solar?

Garmin released its range-topping Edge 1040 last year - and earlier this year was the turn of the units sitting below that, with the 530 and 830 becoming the 540 and 840. Garmin has also added solar charging to the mix, and it's the 840 Solar that we're reviewing here. Tom reviewed the 540 Solar in July and his feelings about it were mixed.

Can the Garmin Edge 840 be charged on the go?

If 30 hours of battery life and solar charging are still not sufficient, the Garmin Edge 840 can be charged on the go with a compatible external battery. The touchscreen is noticeably improved compared to the previous model, and it is much less prone to rain and moisture affecting the functionality.

What is the difference between Garmin Edge 840 and 540?

The Edge 840 has 32GB of storage versus 16GB on the Edge 540. These features will really only matter to riders who travel a lot and rely heavily on GPS navigation. Which Garmin Edge Is Right for You? So you now have four Garmin Edge head units to choose from, or six if you include the two Edge 1040 models released last year. So how do you choose?

Is Garmin Edge 840 a good bike computer?
